Foreword

The concept of Marathon Art was developed by Walter Gaudnek, Johann Eyfells, and Steve Lotz in January of 1971 and first exhibited at the Jacksonville Art Museum in Florida. Since this time, they have participated in ten such events, including a Marathon executed on the Olympic Lake during the XXth Olympiade in Munich, Germany. (See notes on past Marathon events.) Marathon Art is the activity of creating a specific work involving all three artists. Each inserts his own ideas, thoughts, and particular craft as the work is being developed. The result is a combination of experiences culminating into one statement. Thus the work is co-created.

In the past co-created works were produced only by Gaudnek, Eyfells and Lotz, but recently they have begun to involve the public. Gaudnek states, "The experience of the marathon led me to believe in the need for co-creation: something which could be the natural result of a group of people sharing immediate experiences together . . . Now, I wanted more. I wanted the public to become my co-artist."

Why? Because, according to Gaudnek, "Man immersed in a technological bureaucracy is in danger of killing his inherited ability to react to nature and true life situations. Even his art, becoming a mere extension and tool in the computered manipulation of consumer resources, is turning increasingly more sterile."

The exhibition is divided into two sections in four galleries. The first section contains works from past Art Marathons and the second is devoted to Marathon Art co-created for this exhibition.

The Montgomery Museum of Fine Arts must enthusiastically search for fresh concepts in the approach to art and examine the potential of art as an expressive tool of the Seventies. The Marathon Art concept presents us with a challenging viewpoint that is worth considering when evaluating the important movements of this decade.

I would like to thank Roger Ort Mayer for his creative introduction to this catalogue. The generous loans of Mr. Joseph Dodge and the John and Mable Ringling Museum are also most appreciated.

THESE 20th CENTURY ARTISTS REFER TO THEIR MIX VARIOUSLY AS GOOD A WAY AS ANY IS MARATHONART. THEIR IMAGES HAVE A KIND OF ANTE-DILUVIAL SKELETON. BUT THEY ARE AS OUT OF SEASON AS THIS MORNING OR TOMORROW. NEITHER THE ARCHE-TYPAL NOR THE CONTEMPORARY IS A PATINA, A SURFACE OR TEXTURE. IT IS A FRESH MIX OF FORM AND STYLE WHICH AROUSES THE IMAGINATIONS OF THOSE WHO CONFRONT THEM TO FEELINGS OF LONG BURIED MYTHS AND PRESENCES. THEY LIVE IN TODAY THEY BELONG TO THIS DAY THEY ARE FRESH FROM THE ARTISTS' CREATIVE WORK. WHILE THESE ARTISTS BELIEVE IN COCREATION (working together on a project) THEY ARE HIGHLY INDIVIDUALISTIC WORKERS. THEIR STYLES ARE NOT INTERCHANGEABLE. SPACE IS SOMETHING MORE THAN AN AREA TO BE FILLED WITH CRAFTY INVENTION. IT IS HOLYTIME. OR MARATHONARTSPACE. THE ARTISTS HAVE A KIND OF MONUMENTAL ENDURANCE. WORK, DO, FASHION, FABRICATE, HAUL, PUTUP TAKEDOWN. THEY HAVE THE MARATHONERS' REQUISITE: ENDURANCE. AND CREATIVITY.
